universities and colleges who wish to study the labors and results of the two Conferences — and there are thousands of them — will find the work especially adapted to their needs. But it is equally well adapted to the needs of the general public.

L'OEUVRE DE LA HAYE EN 1899 ET EN 1907. By Louis Renault, Professor at the University of Paris. Stockholm, Sweden: P. A. Norstedt & Son.

This work of 24 pages, large octavo, is the lecture given by Professor Renault at the Nobel Institute, Christiania, Norway, on the 18th of May last, as one of the Nobel laureates of 1907. It is a discussion (in French) of the work of the two Hague Conferences, by one of the leading participants, as a delegate, in both of them.

DEUXIEME CONFERENCE INTERNATIONALE DE LA PAIX. 276 pages, folio. Report of the French Delegates, published by the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

DAS INTERNATIONALE LEBEN DER GEGENWART. By A. H. Fried. Leipzig: B. G. Teubner. 111 pages.

Mr. Fried has given us in this little book (in German) a most instructive and interesting presentation of the various phases of the International Life of the Present, including a list of more than one hundred international congresses and conferences held within the past century, and a table, "The Organization of the World," giving a list of seventy-eight general treaties and conventions covering matters of international concern.
